Many of the books contain colored plates. Some very fine colored sporting prints by Alken and others are included in the sale and among the other rarities are "A'Beckett's Comic History of England and Rome," first editions; Egan's "Boxiana" and "Life in London," a remarkably fine copy of "The Fancy," in wrappers; sixteen fine editions of "The Compleat Angler," etc.

The "Frank Forrester" collection was made by Mr. Davis during many years of persistent search. With the exception of one pamphlet, the collection is complete, embracing not only all the books, but all the magazines to which the great authority on American sports contributed. In addition to the books, Mr. Davis gathered autograph letters, portraits, signed photographs, manuscripts and unpublished poems of his favorite author, and he made a small but interesting collection of early American weapons (included in this sale), of which some, like John Brown's pike and Frank Forrester's flintlock derringer, are not only valuable as curios, but have strong association interest.

Henry William Herbert ("Frank Forrester") was born in London in 1807, and came to New York in 1829, where, after eight years of teaching, he became connected with "The American Turf Register." In 1835 he published his first book, "The Brothers, a Tale of the Fronde," a fine copy of which is in this sale. The novel was highly successful, and was soon followed by other works of fiction, which were popular both here and in England. In 1842 he published in two volumes his "Sporting Scenes," which established his reputation as an authority on American sports, a position which he maintained till his death, in 1858. His were the first important American works on hunting and fishing ever published.

Her Strength and Nerve.

For more than ten minutes yesterday afternoon Julia Nigro, eighteen years old, of 1811 Park av., held Mrs. Ellen Kayser dangling by the arms four stories above the street, at that address. The police finally heard the girl's cries, and rescued Mrs. Kayser, who had tried to commit suicide by jumping out of a window.

Before the police came a hundred persons stood below in 125th st. and saw the girl struggle with the deranged woman. As Mrs. Kayser swung from the window Miss Nigro caught her right wrist. She was almost dragged from the window, but finally got a grip with her free hand in the woman's dress.
